SWARM OF BEES. In India, lately, while the army were returning from Alumbagh to camp, one of the Lancers was tempted to poke his spear into a bees' nest, when the swarm at once turned out and attacked the soldiers with such ferocity, that they all turned tail and fled, both officers and men abandoning their guns, and they did not stop until they had reached the camp, where they were enabled to partially protect themselves from their active persecu-

THE PARSON AND THE LADY. A young clergyman residing in this city

a short time ago paid a flying visit to London, and in Oxford street mer a young lady weeping bitterly. Touched by her distress he accosted her, and she told him that she had just come to town from Birmingham with her father, she had missed him in the street, and being an utter stranger was ut OTTERY for the benefit of the State of terly at a loss where to go or what to do. Wilmington. Delaware, on SATURDAY, once to Birmingham, and put her into a cab to proceed to Euston square station, stating that he would have accompained her if he had not been obliged to return to Bristol im mediately. Before driving off he asked the young lady if she had any money to pay her fare, and she replied in the negative. Our friends then handed her a couple of sovereigns and his card, and the cab drove off. Now, we dare say that the reader anticipates the denoument, and is prepared to join in the laugh with which the friends of the 70 00 | clergyman greeted him as a victim of the 35 00 arts of the whimpering miss. But "he who laughs last laughs best," says the proverb; and this was the reward of our friend; for OTTERY for the benefit of the State of after enduring much good-natured sarcasm, Delaware, Class 29, for 1858, to be drawn and, what is perhaps worse, some real pity for his ignorance of female wiles and ingenuity, the story of the forlorn damsel turned out to be true. A few days since our friend received a letter from the lady's father, an aged ciergyman, stating that he had accidentally lost his daughter as the young lady described, and thanking him for "the most disinterested act of kindness he had ever met with in the course of a long life." Of course, an order was enclosed for the repayment of the loan, which bears the highest of all interest, gratitude; and may we not add public repect. -
